

Posted on Tue, Jul. 24, 2012

Miami Dade College partners with business school at Nova Southeastern

By Ina Paiva Cordle

icordle@MiamiHerald.com

Miami Dade College said Monday that it will begin a partnership with the H. Wayne Huizenga School of Business and Entrepreneurship at NOVA Southeastern University to increase opportunities for Miami Dade College students who complete a Bachelor of Applied Science in Supervision and Management and want to pursue a graduate degree in business at NSU.

Through the partnership, MDC students and staff who graduate from the BAS-SM program will be eligible to complete a business master's degree program at NSU with a discounted tuition rate of 25 percent less per credit hour. Some of the programs available include management, global management, leadership, and entrepreneurship, among many other concentrations, the college said.

The agreement becomes effective at both institutions on Sept. 1, at the start of the 2012-2013 academic year.

MDC's BAS-SM program is designed for students currently employed who need a bachelor's degree to increase their career opportunities and wages. The BAS-SM currently has 1,892 students enrolled and another 2,163 pre-admitted in the program. The BAS-SM program is offered at five MDC campuses: Kendall, North, Wolfson, and most recently at Hialeah and Homestead.

---

© 2012 Miami Herald Media Company. All Rights Reserved.
<http://www.miamiherald.com>